Gas Meter Safety
Your meter, regulator and outdoor piping can withstand harsh winter weather, but hard-packed snow, icicles and water dripping on outdoor equipment can create a safety hazard. This winter, keep your meter visible at all times for both ventilation and accessibility for maintenance in the event of an emergency, and never let snow completely cover the meter setting. Use a broom to clear snow from the gas meter and prevent damage to the apparatus.

Help Keep Pipeline Areas Safe

An encroachment occurs when something like a shed, fence, tree or other obstruction is placed within a pipeline easement area. These items can block access to pipelines and create safety hazards. For your safety, it's important to keep pipeline easements clear of any items or structures. Keeping these areas clear helps ensure safe maintenance, protects your property and allows emergency access if needed. Learn more at NIPSCO.com/Encroachments.

Maintaining Your Natural Gas Lines

NIPSCO safely and reliably delivers natural gas through underground pipelines. While we maintain the gas lines up to your meter, you are responsible for locating, repairing or replacing any exposed or buried gas piping on your property beyond the meter, inside and outside, including lines to outdoor appliances (e.g., grills, pool heaters, generators) and indoor appliances. A qualified professional should inspect your property's gas pipes beyond the meter for leaks or corrosion and promptly repair any unsafe conditions.
